

The Qu'Appelle Progress

Is Published every Thursday
At The Progress Printing Office, in the Town of Qu'Appelle, Assiniboia, Canada.

Prohibition First in Politics.

Subscription price, $1.00 per annum, invariably in advance; single copies 2 cents.
A liberal commission will be allowed to parties who are willing to act as agents for us. Write for terms.

The rates for our advertising space by contract are as follows:

	One week.	One month.	Three months.	One year.
One column	$7.00	$10.00	$25.00	$50.00
Half column	4.00	6.00	15.00	30.00
Quarter column	2.00	3.00	7.50	15.00
Three inches	2.00	3.00	7.50	15.00
Two inches	1.50	2.00	5.00	10.00

Business cards $1.00 per month payable quarterly.

The above rates do not apply to auction
sales, entertainments, lectures, meetings, legal notices, or anything of a transient nature. Transient advertisements, 10 cents per line first insertion, 5 cents per line each additional insertion. Yearly advertisements allowed to be changed monthly, if notice $1.00 will be charged for each additional change.

Business locals, 50 cents for first twenty five words; 2 cents for each additional word.
The publisher reserves the right to refuse to insert advertisements of a questionable or objectionable character.

Address, JAMES WEIDMAN,
Qu'Appelle Station, Assin.
E. J. WEIDMAN, Proprietor.

FRIDAY, JAN. 18, 1889.

RESPONSIBLE GOVERNMENT.

How eager a young man is to attain his majority when he can assume his rights as a citizen. Could he do so he would in most instances hasten or anticipate the time. The nearer he comes to the birthday of his manhood
the more irksome become the difficulties of his minority. The Northwest Territories are peopled by communities, and they are made up of individuals. The country has a right to responsible government when the conditions of the people are compatible therewith. This portion of the Dominion has been in a state of tutelage ever since it had an organized government, and the people are becoming dissatisfied. They are jealous of their right to participate in the responsibility of the direction of their local affairs. The question therefore arises —Has the time come when they should be granted a full provincial form of government? The old legislative council was very pronounced in its demand for responsible government, and there certainly was a popular feeling in that direction, though the question of extra expense was an apparent bar to many favoring such a step being taken immediately. As a result we were given the present Legislative Assembly with its Advisory Board, the old Council having outlived its usefulness and the Dominion Government being desirous of gradually bringing up the Northwest Government to the status of full provincial autonomy. The members of the new Assembly came together and after careful investigation and mature discussion they unanimously passed a resolution asking that full responsible government be granted to the Northwest. Among the reasons for coming to this conclusion, were the facts that an estimate of the expense showed very little, if any, in favor of the present system, and that there were too many irresponsible officials in the Government offices, clothed with too much authority, while the people's representatives were possessed of insufficient power to make the system popular and manage the country's affairs satisfactorily. When the Assembly had grasped its financial position and found that out of our total revenue of $160,000 that there was only $19,800 available for public improvements, a feeling akin to disgust took possession of the members of the House. They were kept in the dark as to the expenditure of about $40,000 of our revenue, and the whole of that sum was surrounded with such impenetrable mystery that our representatives said as one voice, "Responsible government would be more satisfactory; it is our right and the time has come when we should be vested with our full powers." It must be borne in mind that when the present system was devised, it was stated that it should remain in force for the full

life of the Assembly, viz.,—three years, but there is reason to assume that the Act would be so amended each year as to gradually increase the powers of the Assembly in the directions that seemed to meet the requirements of the country. However, the members of the Legislature at the recent session were fresh from the people, and their unanimous recommendation must have weight, because if the object were attained they would have to return to the people after one year the trust reposed in them for three years. It remains to be seen what action the Dominion Parliament will take.

In the above article we refer to the fact that the Northwest Legislative Assembly were kept in ignorance respecting the expenditure of about $40,000 of the revenue of the Northwest Territories. It is but fair to state that the Advisory Board had only the revenue and expenditure of ten months in the year to deal with and though both the members of the House and the Board were desirous of submitting the public accounts for the full fiscal year, they had no jurisdiction to do so. Notwithstanding this,
it is thought that the present system of governing the Territories would have met with more favor had this matter been made satisfactory to the country.

SUCCESSFUL COLONIZATION.

We publish in our issue this week
a most interesting article on "Successful Colonization," extracted from the Regina Leader, and evidently written by Mr. C. E. Cullen, the newly appointed Immigrant Agent of the South Qu'Appelle municipality; together with the Leader's endorsement from personal observation of Mr. Cullen's most encouraging statements regarding the flourishing condition of the New Toulouha Settlement.

Mr. Cullen has good reason to be well satisfied with the result of his first colonization effort in the Northwest, and the success of this colony augurs well for the prospects of his forthcoming visit to Europe on behalf of Northwest-immigration. It will,
we are sure, be interesting to the readers of the above article to know that Mr. Cullen was acquainted with the German settlers at New Toulouha, when in their Romanian homes, so long ago as 1868, that they were anxious in 1884 for Mr. Cullen to assist them to locate in the island of Cyprus, where he then held an appointment under the British Government;
that he recommended their emigration, instead, to the Canadian Northwest, communicated with the High Commissioner on the subject, and made all arrangements for settling them here. Mr. Cullen personally accompanied these pioneers from East to Europe on their journey across the Atlantic, and safely conducted them through the United States without losing an individual, select a land for them, and never ceased his exertions until they were settled in their present homes. Nor did he even then relax his efforts, for without his aid during its first year of existence the colony would never have been the success it has proved.

There are large numbers of equally good colonizing material in the lands whence these Toulouha Germans came,
and it is earnestly to be hoped that Mr. Cullen may be able to induce many families to join their countrymen here. There can be no doubt that Mr. Cullen's long and varied experience in taking charge of and transporting large bodies of people during his Eastern career, forms a most important element in his fitness for immigration and colonization work, as also does his acquaintance with so many modern languages, such as German, French, Italian, and the like.

The report that the British government will not appoint a minister to Washington to succeed Lord Sackville until after the inauguration of President Harrison is virtually confirmed.

SUCCESSFUL COLONIZATION.

Regina Leader: Under the above heading we gave an account of one of our most successful settlements—that of "New Toulouha." A leading member of our staff has since visited it and was surprised and delighted with the progress of our German settlers. Mr. Charles Edward Cullen has by his endeavours to forward settlement—endeavours which have been crowned with signal success—land this great Regina district under lasting obligations. We understand he leaves for England soon and we anticipate good results from his efforts to bring a thriving class of settlers to this land of promise and home of the free.

Look at the effects of drunkenness upon a man. God made man in his own image. What marks that image and stamps it with the command of the devil? Drink does it.
"Man by nature walks erect and lifts his forehead to the skies," and he is crowned lord of creation.
What breaks his sceptre, tears his crown from his brow, and dreads him below the level of the beasts?
Drink does it. What sears the heart and damps up the fountain of pure and holy affection? It is the drink. No young man expects anything of this kind to come upon him. We do not say that it will,
but we want to warn a young man who is a moderate drinker that he stands on dangerous ground.

Something of the way they do business in enforcing the Prohibition law of the Northwest may be gathered from the following: "The police seized about 150 gallons of whiskey on route from Guelph to Melton. The owner of it was fined $200 and c.s.s., and his horse, wagon, etc., were confiscated under the N. W. T. Act of 1888.
This whiskey could have been sold here for about $1,200."

The difficulty of enforcing the law in Monro, New Brunswick, is not likely to be so great hereafter. The Town Council have recently decided that police officers must see the law carried out. About thirty cases were pending, and the liquor party met,
made a proposal to pay jointly $500,
and ask to be released from the present series of prosecutions. An agreement to this effect was arrived at, we presume with the assurance that these liquor men would not again violate the law.

THE GREAT CARNIVAL.

Tremendous interest is being taken in the approaching Carnival in Montreal. The Governor General is to inaugurate the festivities and give the entire week's programme his patronage.
State Governors, Lieut. Governments and prominent people from all parts of the world are to view the spectacles. Letters are pouring in to the Committee from Europe and the United States enquiring for particulars.
The Committee are making extraordinary preparations for a magnificent Carnival. Those who cannot go to Montreal for a week of wonderful amusement will we hear, find the events in all their vividness and beauty produced in the Grand number of the Montreal Star, which is sent will be a perfectly stunning number.

DARWIN'S THEORY.

Darwin's theory of the "survival of the fittest" is simply that the weakly die, while the robust and hardy thrive and live. How true this is of seed growth, and how necessary to sow only that which is suited by nature to live and develop.

P. M. Ferry & Co., the great Seed Growers and Seed Dealers of Detroit, Michigan, supply only the best and purest, raising their own seeds by the most improved methods and with the greatest care, bringing to their business the invaluable aid of more than thirty years' experience.
Their Seed Catalogue for 1889 is a real help to the gardener, and should be in the hands of all who desire to purchase pure and true seeds. Send your name to the firms address at Detroit, Michigan, and they will forward you a copy.

BROKEN DOWN.

"After suffering with dyspepsia, indigestion, loss of appetite and pain in the head until discouraged, I bought of B. B. B., two bottles and am happy to say I feel as well as ever." Mrs. Rufus E. Merry, New Albany, N. S.

S. H. COLLINS.

QU'APPELLE,

DEALER IN

Boots and Shoes!

AT

Any Price You Want Them

From $1 up to $10.

BOOTS MADE TO ORDER

TERMS CASH.

S. H. COLLINS.

C. A. BENNER

Has opened up a

MEAT SHOP.

In the Landsdowne Hall and will be pleased to do business with all who will favor him with their patronage.
Dec. 7, 1888.

QU'APPELLE

SKATING RINK.

W. G. VICARS

HAS FITTED up the above rink for the season of 1888-9, and will be in constant attendance.

R. JOHNSTON,

DEALER IN

Agricultural Implements,

Barbed Wire,

Buggies, Buckboards,

WAGONS, ETC.

LIVERY,

Feed and Sale Stable

First Class Rigs.

Daily Stage to Fort Qu'Appelle

QU'APPELLE, ASSIN.

A few copies of the Christmas Globe still left at

QU'APPELLE

MEDICAL HALL,

In "The Progress" Building.

A CAREFULLY ASSORTED STOCK OF

DRUGS, CHEMICALS,

PATENT MEDICINES,

TOILET ARTICLES,

TOGETHER WITH A FULL ASSORTMENT OF

Books, Stationery and Fancy Goods,

FORMING A FIRST CLASS DRUG & STATIONERY STORE.

Horse and Cattle Medicines a Speciality.

Physicians Prescriptions and Family Recipes Carefully Compounded

PRICES RIGHT.

WM. BRYDON.

(Late Examiner of the Ontario College of Pharmacy.)

Qu'Appelle, Oct. 18, 1888.

MANAGER.

NEW

Fall and Winter Goods!

NOW OPENED OUT.

S. H. CASWELL.

Wholesale and Retail Merchant and Banker.

Post Office Store, Qu'Appelle.

QUEEN'S HOTEL,

OF THE

TOWN OF QU'APPELLE.

The Leading House in the West.

G. S. DAVIDSON, Proprietor.

The Canada North-West Land Co.

(LIMITED.)

Offer for Sale

SELECTED FARM LANDS

In Manitoba and the North-West Territories.

Near the Canadian Pacific Railway Main Line

A large proportion of this Company's Lands is in thickly settled Districts.

For information, Prices and Maps, apply at the offices of the Company, 14 Castle street,
Edinburgh, Scotland; 75 Lombard street, London, England; 1st Main street, Winnipeg, Manitoba.

W. B. SCARTH

MANAGING DIRECTOR FOR CANADA

Canadian Pacific Railway Town Lots.

THE TOWN SITE TRUSTEES OFFER FOR SALE

Building Sites at all Stations on Main Line of above Railway Between Brandon and Calgary

W. B. SCARTH, Trustee.

AGENT IN QU'APPELLE FOR LANDS AND TOWN LOTS.

LESLIE GORDON,

Newsy Notes.

The Week's News Boiled down for Progress Readers.

Mrs. Jay Gould died at New York on Sunday evening.

A blue book on the Sackville affair has just been published.

Bailiffs came out victorious in an eviction fight in Ireland on Friday.

It is reported in London that a ring is being formed in the cotton thread business.

C. Brothen left his wife, aged 20 at New York, and Friday night she shot herself, probably fatally.

A man named Gavin, who took a farm from which the tenant had been evicted, has been shot at Clare.

There seems to be little doubt about the commencement of operations of the Alberta-Alberta railway in the spring.

The boiler in Bell's mill at Pellston, Mich., blew out yesterday afternoon, killing the foreman, head sawyer, and another man.

Baron Von Schiller, Austrian ambassador at Rio Janeiro, has been transferred to Bern, Count Von Welsersheim will succeed him.

Prof. Bryce, M.P., has started for India. He wishes to make a thorough study of the Afghan question, and will reside on the northwest frontier for the purpose.

Panama canal shareholders want the French Minister of Foreign Affairs to reform the bankruptcy laws before the meeting called by the canal company takes place.

Trouble may arise between England and France over the Newfoundland fisheries. The latter threatens to end all treaties unless England carries out that of Utrecht.

Isaac Willi, who escaped from jail December 30, attempted to gain entrance to his wife's room at New Florence, Ind., and being interfered with by the sheriff, shot the latter dead. A mob then killed Willi.

G. B. Baker and E. K. Hight, representing about 2,000,000 of Baltimore money, are in Duluth in the interests of the Baltimore syndicate which is to build the Duluth & Winnipeg railway as a construction company.

The Hon. J. H. Chapleau is improving under the care of French surgeons. He said that Canada had no more intention of joining the United States than Normandy has of joining Germany.

Friday last being the 75th anniversary of Sir John Macdonald's birthday, the premier was the recipient of congratulatory telegrams from all quarters. Some lady friends in the city sent baskets of flowers.

W. H. Knowlton, of Toronto, gives notice of application to incorporate the Brandon, Souris City & Rock Lake railway, with power to construct from some point at or near Brandon through Souris City and in a southeasterly direction towards Rock Lake, thence to the southern boundary.

The Canadian Pacific Railway company gives notice that it will apply at the next session for an act enabling it to reacquire and consolidate the capital charge upon the entire railway system without increasing the annual charges thereon, and to make further provision for a steamship plant and equipment.

It is indicated that the British government will force Sir John Macdonald to recede from his policy of restricting Chinese immigration, as being inconsistent with treaty obligations. The government of China has directed the attention of the British government to the hostile attitude of Australia and Canada to the Chinese, and is discussing the propriety of withdrawing commercial privileges unless treaty rights are observed. Should the Dominion Government withdraw the Restriction act, the number of Chinese arrivals at Victoria or Vancouver, B. C., would be greatly multiplied, as that would no longer be made the channel of a large influx of Chinese into the United States.

Fighting continues in Samoa between Germans and Samoans.

United States Minister Phelps will sail for New York on the steamer Lahn on January 31.

Riot at Gray county, Kan., resulted in several men being killed and wounded, on Saturday.

Thursday night 5,000 pounds of opium and twelve Chinamen were captured on Puget Sound.

An official bulletin was issued on Saturday declaring Jacksonville free from all contagious or infectious diseases.

Commissioner of Indian Affairs Oberly argues in his annual report that Indian education should be compulsory.

The King of Holland was very restless throughout all of Saturday night. A physician is constantly at his bedside.

Mrs. J. S. Killan and her nine-year son, Willie, were murdered by a negro near Birmingham, Ala., on Friday night.

Henry Christ and Mrs. Eva Herkenner were run over by the cars of the Long Island railroad, near Hinsdale, on Sunday and killed.

H. More, of London, England, attempted suicide at San Francisco Sunday, by cutting his throat. He is well connected in the old country.

It is estimated that 1,000,000 cattle will be shipped to market next season from Montana territory, and 130,000 will be driven from the south.

The Vatican will instruct the Archbishop of Naples to call upon Gladstone, provided that Gladstone will signify that the visit would be agreeable to him.

Diplomatic circles in London are agitated concerning the Samsan affair, and the possibility of a rupture between Germany and America is being canvassed.

Prince Kropotkin, in the course of a lecture in the Whitechapel district on Saturday night, advised socialists to obtain possession of railways, factories, etc.

It is stated that in the colonial debate in the Reichstag Prince Bismarck will especially refer to the cordial and friendly relations between Germany and Great Britain.

An order has gone forth that all operators of the Telegraphers' Brotherhood on the Iowa division of the Chicago & Northwestern railway must resign or quit work.

In the international skating championship contest, Saturday, at Vienna, Panshing came in first and Douglass second. Douglass then skated two miles alone in 6 minutes 30 1/2 seconds.

The Icelandic colony on the Red Deer near the Alberta Milling Co's, mills numbers about 100 souls. They came from near Pembina, Dak., and are well pleased with their present location and with the climate. A further immigration of about 400 people of the same nationality from the same part of Dakota is expected next season.

If the gentleman next you goes out between acts, remember that no lady will place her hand on his vacant chair and forget all about it until next morning.

When you take your seat next to a lady, remember that the rest of the audience will not mind hearing them a second time.

In leaving the theatre, if you are a woman, put your hand in the small of the gentleman's back as you push him, and if you are a man put your arm around him and squeeze.

Men of short stature who find it difficult to see the stage will find a thick ulcer and a sudden escape of great assistance when properly folded and used as a basis of operations.

You may throw a bouquet or a horseshoe of roses at the prima donna, but never leave a ticket at the door or present the lowest profanity by hitting him in the neck with a goblet.

Even if a play is stupid you have no right to sneer so loud that the waiting gentleman forgets his lines through nervousness. However loud, but not make the play any better.

If the author of the play happens to sit next to you, do not ask him to go to some other theatre to see a show that is worth looking at. He may have done his best on the play you are witnessing.

SEWING CIRCLE GOSSIP.

Some of the new umbrella handles are hideous enough to frighten a girl out of her wits.

A novel conceit is the use of Russian sligh bells on frames for cut bells on fashionable tea tables.

A liquid is now sold that is guaranteed to make shabby securities look as good as new. Now every woman can be her own dyer.

In houses where there has been contagious illness, the fur rugs are dangerous and ought to be buried in a quantity of foot and ground.

"Art embroideries" in lampreys, piano covers, chair seats and what not have run riot in the newest examples seen, and it can well be imagined that the designers must be in the asylum.

Foot-locks of post-humous, with alleged "real horn feet," are put forth as new, but yet are advertised for sale at really "hand-me-down" prices. It may be Horn goats are more numerous this season.

Large solid silver card cases, such as our grandmothers revealed in coming in fashion again after a long and regretted absence. It is the proper thing to have your name or initials engraved on the side.

PRESENCE OF MIND.

Presence of mind is good in case of accidents and emergencies, and when coupled with Haggard's Yellow Oil will often save life. Yellow Oil cures all painful injuries, burns, scalds, bruises, frost bites, rheumatic and neuralgic pains and is in fact a handy and reliable surgical aid.

MONTEAL STOCK MARKET.

Montreal stock reported in Cator, Hammond & Nanton, brokers, Winnipeg, Wednesday, Jan. 7, 1889.

Stock	Sellers	Buyers
Montreal.....	20 1/2	236
Ontario.....	12 1/2	125
Manitoba.....	10 1/2	153
Quebec.....	10 1/2	212
Manitoba.....	10 1/2	134
Union.....	9 1/2	94
Commodore.....	18 1/2	117 1/2
Montreal Tel.....	50	59
Reb. & Ont. Sav.....	7 1/2	82
City Pass. Co.....	10 1/2	18
Montreal Gas.....	10 1/2	197
Can. N.W. Land.....	40	62
C.P.R. stock (Montreal)	24 1/2	22 1/2
C.P.R. stock (London)	24 1/2	22 1/2
Money on Time.....	4 1/2	—
Money on Call.....	4 1/2	—

Adjourned Sale ! OF LANDS FOR TAXES.

Adjourned Sale of Farm Lands of the MUNICIPALITY OF South Qu'Appelle.

For unpaid taxes, will take place on MONDAY, FEB. 4, 1889, At 10 o'clock, a.m., in McLean's Hall, Qu'Appelle (station) S.W. 1.

JAMES H. BENSON Sheriff.

N.B.—A. M. McLean Esq., is authorized by me to receive payment of taxes according to list of 1888, 1887 and 1886, and to give receipts therefor.

JAMES H. BENSON Sheriff.

Public Notice.

PUBLIC NOTICE is hereby given that His Honor, the Lieutenant Governor has been pleased to order that citizens of the city of Regina, who have been notified by the said Lieutenant Governor to appear before him on the 1st day of January, 1889, at the said place, to show cause why they should not be removed from the said city, should appear at the said place on the 1st day of January, 1889, at the said place, to show cause why they should not be removed from the said city.

REGINA, Monday, 25th March, 1889. QU'APPELLE STATION, Friday, 5th April, 1889. SWIFT CURRENT, Monday, 8th April, 1889. MOOSE JAW, Tuesday, 9th April, 1889. FORT QU'APPELLE, Friday, 3rd May, 1889.

By Command R. B. GORDON, Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of Saskatchewan, N. W. T., 13 January, 1889.

Now being published in The Progress.

— A —

Wonderful Story!

Colonel Quaritch

By the Famous Novelist, E. RIDER HAGGARD.

Illustrated by Miranda.

One of the foremost newspaper artists in the country. Every reader will desire to follow this story from the beginning.

This Story Abounds in Dramatic Situations.

PACK NUMBERS SUPPLIED.

A Few Sample Illustrations.

We invite particular attention to the design and workmanship of the following illustrations taken from among those appearing in this story:

The Colonel Meets the Squire.

Ida Watched the Door Close.

For a second there was silence.

New Jewelry Store

P. E. DURST

HAS OPENED a jewelry store in the premises formerly occupied by Mr. C. G. Jones, Qu'Appelle street, where will be kept a choice stock of Gold and Silver Watches, Clocks, Jewelry, etc.

REPAIRING.

Watches, Clocks, Jewelry, etc., will be promptly attended to.

All Work Guaranteed. W. E. INGRAHAM, Manager. Qu'Appelle, Jan. 10, 1889.

Sale of Farm Lands

AND TOWN PROPERTY.

In Assiniboia, N. W. T.

UNUSUAL OPPORTUNITY

Now offered for the disposal of the above.

Owners wishing to Realize

Are requested to send full particulars of property with lowest selling prices to C. E. CULLEN, Or R. DUNDAS STROGO, Advocate, Qu'Appelle Station, N. W. T.

J. H. MacCAUL,

Insurance Agent,

AND DEALER IN

Hard & Soft Coal,

LUMBER,

SASH,

DOORS,

BUILDING PAPER, Etc., Etc.

QU'APPELLE.

Branch at Indian Head.

FRANK MARWOOD

SUCCESSOR TO T. WELSH,

General Blacksmith

— AND —

Practical Horse-shoer.

A trial solicited from parties having lame or interfering horses. Flow shares made to order and satisfaction guaranteed.

WORK DONE CHEAP FOR CASH.

J. B. ROBINSON

Contractor, Builder,

ETC., ETC.

QU'APPELLE.

All Work in my Line will Receive Careful Attention.

NEW BAKERY.

A. McKenzie,

QU'APPELLE.

BREAD ! FRUITS !

CONFECTIONERY, &c.

Constantly on hand.

Birthday and Bride's Cakes

A SPECIALTY.

JOHN B. MILLIKEN & Co.

Manufacturers and Dealers in all kinds of

Harness & Saddlery

WHIPS,

CURRY COMBS,

HORSE BRUSHES,

ROLLS,

BLANKETS,

SADDLES,

TRUNKS,

VALISES,

ETC., ETC., ETC.

Qu'Appelle, Nov. 25, 1888.

COLONEL QUARITCH, V.C.

By H. RIDGE HARGRAVE.

(CONTINUED.)

"How do you do, Quess?" said Edward Cossey, nodding somewhat coldly to the lawyer and sitting down. "Any business?"

"Well, yes, Mr. Cossey," answered the lawyer, raising his eyebrows. "I am a very busy man, some very serious business."

"Indeed," said Edward, indifferently, "what is it?"

"Well, it is this: the house has ordered a foreman on the Hounslow estate—at least it comes to that."

At the sound of this intelligence Edward Cossey's whole demeanor underwent the most startling transformation—his tongue vanished, his eyes brightened, and his form became instinct with active life and beauty.

"What the deuce," he said, and then paused. "I won't have it," he went on, jumping up. "I won't have it. I don't particularly like the old deuce in the Mole, because he is not particularly fond of me," he added, rather drolly; "but it would be an infernal shame to break up that family and sell the house under those terms. Why, then, must I be ruined. And then there's Miss de la Mole, I mean—what would become of her? The old place, too. After being in the family for all these centuries, I suppose it would be sold to some confounded lawyer. It must be prevented at any price—do you hear, Quess?"

The lawyer wrinkled a little at his chief's contemptuous allusion, and then remarked, with a smile, "I don't know, sir, whether you are sentimental, Mr. Cossey, or that you have a lively interest in Miss de la Mole, but I glanced up to observe the effect of his shot."

Edward Cossey colored. "I did not mean that I took any particular interest in Miss de la Mole," he said. "I was referring to the family."

"Oh, quite so, though I am sure I don't know if you should not. Miss de la Mole is one of the most charming women I ever met, I think the most charming. If I except my own wife Belle, and he again looked up suddenly at Edward Cossey, who, for his part, looked for the second time. "It seems to me," went on the lawyer, "that a man in your position has a most splendid opportunity of playing knight errant to the lovely damsel in distress. Here is the lady with her aged father about to be sold up and turned out of the estate, and she has belonged to her family for generations—why don't you do the generous and graceful thing, like the hero in a novel, and take up the mortgage?"

Edward Cossey looked at the lawyer with the contempt that might have been expected; on the contrary, he appeared to be turning the matter over in his mind, for he turned a little time with his knuckles and stared out of the window.

"Five and twenty thousand, and he wants four more, say thirty thousand."

"And were you going to bid thirty thousand pounds to take a bundle of mortgages which will probably never pay a farthing of interest? Why, I have not got three thousand I can come at. Besides," he added, recollecting himself, "why should I interfere in it?"

"I do not think," answered Mr. Quess, ignoring the latter part of the question, "that with your prospects you would find it difficult to get thirty thousand or twice thirty thousand pounds. I am a lawyer who would consider it an honor to lend the money to a Cossey, if only for the sake of the introduction—that is, of course, provided the security was of a legal nature."

"Let me see the title," said Edward.

Mr. Quess handed him the document containing the commands of Cossey & Son, and he read it through twice.

"The old man's madness," he said, and he returned it; "that letter was written by him, and when he has once made up his mind it is useless to try and stir him. Did you say that you were going to see the spirit to-day?"

"No, I did not say so, but as a matter of fact I am. His man, George, a shrewd fellow, by the way, for one of these bumpkins—came with a letter asking me to go up to the castle, so I shall go there to-morrow. It is about this fresh loan of the old gentleman wishes to negotiate. Of course I shall be obliged to tell him that instead of giving a fresh loan we shall have to serve a notice on him."

"Don't do that just yet," said Edward, with decision. "Write to the house and say that their instructions shall be attended to. There is no hurry about the matter, though I don't see how I can help in the matter. Indeed there is no call upon me."

"Very well, Mr. Cossey. And now, by the way, are you going to the castle this afternoon?"

"Yes, I believe so. Why?"

"Well, I want to get there to luncheon, and I am in a fix. Belle will want the trap to go there this afternoon. Can you lend me your dog cart to drive in, and then perhaps you would not mind if she gave you a bit this afternoon?"

"Very well," answered Edward, "that is if it suits Mrs. Quess. Perhaps she may object to carrying out the cart to the castle."

"I have not observed any such reluctance on her part," said the lawyer drolly. "You can easily settle the question. I must go home to get some of the books, though I don't see any reason why I should not attend to the matter. Will you stop across with me and we can have tea?"

"Oh, yes," he answered. "I have nothing particular to do."

And accordingly, as soon as Mr. Quess had made some small arrangements and given particular directions to his clerks as to his whereabouts for the day, they set off to gather for tea in the lawyer's private house.

CHAPTER VIII.

MR. QUASS'S WIFE.

Mr. Quess lived in one of those ugly but comfortably built old brick houses which abound in almost every country town, and which give to the crowded suburbs of the great cities a look of the growth age in which they were built. This house looked out on to the market place, and had a charming old garden, and a fine view of the town, and a fine view of the town, and a fine view of the town.

The front door, however, was only reached by a flight of steps from the street, and the house was not particularly attractive.

Entering into a large, cool looking hall, Mr. Quess paused, and asked a servant who was passing where his mistress was. "In the drawing room, sir," said the girl; and followed by Edward Cossey, he made his way down a long paneled passage till he reached a door on the left, which he opened quickly, and passed through into a charming, modern looking room, landomely and even luxuriously furnished, and lighted by French windows opening on to the garden.

A little lady dressed in some black material, and with a pair of those window shades crossed behind her back, and absently gazing out of it. At the sound of the opening door she turned swiftly, her whole delicate and lovely face lighting up like a flower in a ray of sunshine, the lips slightly parted, and a deep and happy light shining in her violet eyes. Then, all in an instant, it was instinctive to observe how instantly her glance fell upon her husband for the first time was Mrs. Quess and her entire expression changed to one of cold aversion, the light fading out of her face as it does from a November sky, and leaving it cold and hard.

"What the deuce," he said, and then paused. "I won't have it," he went on, jumping up. "I won't have it. I don't particularly like the old deuce in the Mole, because he is not particularly fond of me," he added, rather drolly; "but it would be an infernal shame to break up that family and sell the house under those terms. Why, then, must I be ruined. And then there's Miss de la Mole, I mean—what would become of her? The old place, too. After being in the family for all these centuries, I suppose it would be sold to some confounded lawyer. It must be prevented at any price—do you hear, Quess?"

Edward Cossey colored. "I did not mean that I took any particular interest in Miss de la Mole," he said. "I was referring to the family."

"Oh, quite so, though I am sure I don't know if you should not. Miss de la Mole is one of the most charming women I ever met, I think the most charming. If I except my own wife Belle, and he again looked up suddenly at Edward Cossey, who, for his part, looked for the second time. "It seems to me," went on the lawyer, "that a man in your position has a most splendid opportunity of playing knight errant to the lovely damsel in distress. Here is the lady with her aged father about to be sold up and turned out of the estate, and she has belonged to her family for generations—why don't you do the generous and graceful thing, like the hero in a novel, and take up the mortgage?"

Edward Cossey looked at the lawyer with the contempt that might have been expected; on the contrary, he appeared to be turning the matter over in his mind, for he turned a little time with his knuckles and stared out of the window.

"Five and twenty thousand, and he wants four more, say thirty thousand."

"And were you going to bid thirty thousand pounds to take a bundle of mortgages which will probably never pay a farthing of interest? Why, I have not got three thousand I can come at. Besides," he added, recollecting himself, "why should I interfere in it?"

"I do not think," answered Mr. Quess, ignoring the latter part of the question, "that with your prospects you would find it difficult to get thirty thousand or twice thirty thousand pounds. I am a lawyer who would consider it an honor to lend the money to a Cossey, if only for the sake of the introduction—that is, of course, provided the security was of a legal nature."

"Let me see the title," said Edward.

Mr. Quess handed him the document containing the commands of Cossey & Son, and he read it through twice.

"The old man's madness," he said, and he returned it; "that letter was written by him, and when he has once made up his mind it is useless to try and stir him. Did you say that you were going to see the spirit to-day?"

"No, I did not say so, but as a matter of fact I am. His man, George, a shrewd fellow, by the way, for one of these bumpkins—came with a letter asking me to go up to the castle, so I shall go there to-morrow. It is about this fresh loan of the old gentleman wishes to negotiate. Of course I shall be obliged to tell him that instead of giving a fresh loan we shall have to serve a notice on him."

"Don't do that just yet," said Edward, with decision. "Write to the house and say that their instructions shall be attended to. There is no hurry about the matter, though I don't see how I can help in the matter. Indeed there is no call upon me."

"Very well, Mr. Cossey. And now, by the way, are you going to the castle this afternoon?"

"Yes, I believe so. Why?"

"Well, I want to get there to luncheon, and I am in a fix. Belle will want the trap to go there this afternoon. Can you lend me your dog cart to drive in, and then perhaps you would not mind if she gave you a bit this afternoon?"

"Very well," answered Edward, "that is if it suits Mrs. Quess. Perhaps she may object to carrying out the cart to the castle."

"I have not observed any such reluctance on her part," said the lawyer drolly. "You can easily settle the question. I must go home to get some of the books, though I don't see any reason why I should not attend to the matter. Will you stop across with me and we can have tea?"

"Oh, yes," he answered. "I have nothing particular to do."

And accordingly, as soon as Mr. Quess had made some small arrangements and given particular directions to his clerks as to his whereabouts for the day, they set off to gather for tea in the lawyer's private house.

Edward Cossey looked at the lawyer with the contempt that might have been expected; on the contrary, he appeared to be turning the matter over in his mind, for he turned a little time with his knuckles and stared out of the window.

"Five and twenty thousand, and he wants four more, say thirty thousand."

"And were you going to bid thirty thousand pounds to take a bundle of mortgages which will probably never pay a farthing of interest? Why, I have not got three thousand I can come at. Besides," he added, recollecting himself, "why should I interfere in it?"

"I do not think," answered Mr. Quess, ignoring the latter part of the question, "that with your prospects you would find it difficult to get thirty thousand or twice thirty thousand pounds. I am a lawyer who would consider it an honor to lend the money to a Cossey, if only for the sake of the introduction—that is, of course, provided the security was of a legal nature."

"Let me see the title," said Edward.

Mr. Quess handed him the document containing the commands of Cossey & Son, and he read it through twice.

"The old man's madness," he said, and he returned it; "that letter was written by him, and when he has once made up his mind it is useless to try and stir him. Did you say that you were going to see the spirit to-day?"

"No, I did not say so, but as a matter of fact I am. His man, George, a shrewd fellow, by the way, for one of these bumpkins—came with a letter asking me to go up to the castle, so I shall go there to-morrow. It is about this fresh loan of the old gentleman wishes to negotiate. Of course I shall be obliged to tell him that instead of giving a fresh loan we shall have to serve a notice on him."

Edward Cossey looked at the lawyer with the contempt that might have been expected; on the contrary, he appeared to be turning the matter over in his mind, for he turned a little time with his knuckles and stared out of the window.

"Five and twenty thousand, and he wants four more, say thirty thousand."

"And were you going to bid thirty thousand pounds to take a bundle of mortgages which will probably never pay a farthing of interest? Why, I have not got three thousand I can come at. Besides," he added, recollecting himself, "why should I interfere in it?"

"I do not think," answered Mr. Quess, ignoring the latter part of the question, "that with your prospects you would find it difficult to get thirty thousand or twice thirty thousand pounds. I am a lawyer who would consider it an honor to lend the money to a Cossey, if only for the sake of the introduction—that is, of course, provided the security was of a legal nature."

"Let me see the title," said Edward.

Mr. Quess handed him the document containing the commands of Cossey & Son, and he read it through twice.

"The old man's madness," he said, and he returned it; "that letter was written by him, and when he has once made up his mind it is useless to try and stir him. Did you say that you were going to see the spirit to-day?"

"No, I did not say so, but as a matter of fact I am. His man, George, a shrewd fellow, by the way, for one of these bumpkins—came with a letter asking me to go up to the castle, so I shall go there to-morrow. It is about this fresh loan of the old gentleman wishes to negotiate. Of course I shall be obliged to tell him that instead of giving a fresh loan we shall have to serve a notice on him."

"Don't do that just yet," said Edward, with decision. "Write to the house and say that their instructions shall be attended to. There is no hurry about the matter, though I don't see how I can help in the matter. Indeed there is no call upon me."

"Very well, Mr. Cossey. And now, by the way, are you going to the castle this afternoon?"

"Yes, I believe so. Why?"

"Well, I want to get there to luncheon, and I am in a fix. Belle will want the trap to go there this afternoon. Can you lend me your dog cart to drive in, and then perhaps you would not mind if she gave you a bit this afternoon?"

"Very well," answered Edward, "that is if it suits Mrs. Quess. Perhaps she may object to carrying out the cart to the castle."

"I have not observed any such reluctance on her part," said the lawyer drolly. "You can easily settle the question. I must go home to get some of the books, though I don't see any reason why I should not attend to the matter. Will you stop across with me and we can have tea?"

"Oh, yes," he answered. "I have nothing particular to do."

And accordingly, as soon as Mr. Quess had made some small arrangements and given particular directions to his clerks as to his whereabouts for the day, they set off to gather for tea in the lawyer's private house.

Edward Cossey looked at the lawyer with the contempt that might have been expected; on the contrary, he appeared to be turning the matter over in his mind, for he turned a little time with his knuckles and stared out of the window.

"Five and twenty thousand, and he wants four more, say thirty thousand."

"And were you going to bid thirty thousand pounds to take a bundle of mortgages which will probably never pay a farthing of interest? Why, I have not got three thousand I can come at. Besides," he added, recollecting himself, "why should I interfere in it?"

"I do not think," answered Mr. Quess, ignoring the latter part of the question, "that with your prospects you would find it difficult to get thirty thousand or twice thirty thousand pounds. I am a lawyer who would consider it an honor to lend the money to a Cossey, if only for the sake of the introduction—that is, of course, provided the security was of a legal nature."

"Let me see the title," said Edward.

Mr. Quess handed him the document containing the commands of Cossey & Son, and he read it through twice.

"The old man's madness," he said, and he returned it; "that letter was written by him, and when he has once made up his mind it is useless to try and stir him. Did you say that you were going to see the spirit to-day?"

"No, I did not say so, but as a matter of fact I am. His man, George, a shrewd fellow, by the way, for one of these bumpkins—came with a letter asking me to go up to the castle, so I shall go there to-morrow. It is about this fresh loan of the old gentleman wishes to negotiate. Of course I shall be obliged to tell him that instead of giving a fresh loan we shall have to serve a notice on him."

"Don't do that just yet," said Edward, with decision. "Write to the house and say that their instructions shall be attended to. There is no hurry about the matter, though I don't see how I can help in the matter. Indeed there is no call upon me."

"Very well, Mr. Cossey. And now, by the way, are you going to the castle this afternoon?"

"Yes, I believe so. Why?"

"Well, I want to get there to luncheon, and I am in a fix. Belle will want the trap to go there this afternoon. Can you lend me your dog cart to drive in, and then perhaps you would not mind if she gave you a bit this afternoon?"

"Very well," answered Edward, "that is if it suits Mrs. Quess. Perhaps she may object to carrying out the cart to the castle."

Edward Cossey looked at the lawyer with the contempt that might have been expected; on the contrary, he appeared to be turning the matter over in his mind, for he turned a little time with his knuckles and stared out of the window.

"Five and twenty thousand, and he wants four more, say thirty thousand."

"And were you going to bid thirty thousand pounds to take a bundle of mortgages which will probably never pay a farthing of interest? Why, I have not got three thousand I can come at. Besides," he added, recollecting himself, "why should I interfere in it?"

"I do not think," answered Mr. Quess, ignoring the latter part of the question, "that with your prospects you would find it difficult to get thirty thousand or twice thirty thousand pounds. I am a lawyer who would consider it an honor to lend the money to a Cossey, if only for the sake of the introduction—that is, of course, provided the security was of a legal nature."

"Let me see the title," said Edward.

Mr. Quess handed him the document containing the commands of Cossey & Son, and he read it through twice.

"The old man's madness," he said, and he returned it; "that letter was written by him, and when he has once made up his mind it is useless to try and stir him. Did you say that you were going to see the spirit to-day?"

"No, I did not say so, but as a matter of fact I am. His man, George, a shrewd fellow, by the way, for one of these bumpkins—came with a letter asking me to go up to the castle, so I shall go there to-morrow. It is about this fresh loan of the old gentleman wishes to negotiate. Of course I shall be obliged to tell him that instead of giving a fresh loan we shall have to serve a notice on him."

"Don't do that just yet," said Edward, with decision. "Write to the house and say that their instructions shall be attended to. There is no hurry about the matter, though I don't see how I can help in the matter. Indeed there is no call upon me."

"Very well, Mr. Cossey. And now, by the way, are you going to the castle this afternoon?"

"Yes, I believe so. Why?"

"Well, I want to get there to luncheon, and I am in a fix. Belle will want the trap to go there this afternoon. Can you lend me your dog cart to drive in, and then perhaps you would not mind if she gave you a bit this afternoon?"

"Very well," answered Edward, "that is if it suits Mrs. Quess. Perhaps she may object to carrying out the cart to the castle."

"I have not observed any such reluctance on her part," said the lawyer drolly. "You can easily settle the question. I must go home to get some of the books, though I don't see any reason why I should not attend to the matter. Will you stop across with me and we can have tea?"

"Oh, yes," he answered. "I have nothing particular to do."

And accordingly, as soon as Mr. Quess had made some small arrangements and given particular directions to his clerks as to his whereabouts for the day, they set off to gather for tea in the lawyer's private house.

Edward Cossey looked at the lawyer with the contempt that might have been expected; on the contrary, he appeared to be turning the matter over in his mind, for he turned a little time with his knuckles and stared out of the window.

"Five and twenty thousand, and he wants four more, say thirty thousand."

"And were you going to bid thirty thousand pounds to take a bundle of mortgages which will probably never pay a farthing of interest? Why, I have not got three thousand I can come at. Besides," he added, recollecting himself, "why should I interfere in it?"

"I do not think," answered Mr. Quess, ignoring the latter part of the question, "that with your prospects you would find it difficult to get thirty thousand or twice thirty thousand pounds. I am a lawyer who would consider it an honor to lend the money to a Cossey, if only for the sake of the introduction—that is, of course, provided the security was of a legal nature."

"Let me see the title," said Edward.

Mr. Quess handed him the document containing the commands of Cossey & Son, and he read it through twice.

"The old man's madness," he said, and he returned it; "that letter was written by him, and when he has once made up his mind it is useless to try and stir him. Did you say that you were going to see the spirit to-day?"

"No, I did not say so, but as a matter of fact I am. His man, George, a shrewd fellow, by the way, for one of these bumpkins—came with a letter asking me to go up to the castle, so I shall go there to-morrow. It is about this fresh loan of the old gentleman wishes to negotiate. Of course I shall be obliged to tell him that instead of giving a fresh loan we shall have to serve a notice on him."

"Don't do that just yet," said Edward, with decision. "Write to the house and say that their instructions shall be attended to. There is no hurry about the matter, though I don't see how I can help in the matter. Indeed there is no call upon me."

"Very well, Mr. Cossey. And now, by the way, are you going to the castle this afternoon?"

"Yes, I believe so. Why?"

"Well, I want to get there to luncheon, and I am in a fix. Belle will want the trap to go there this afternoon. Can you lend me your dog cart to drive in, and then perhaps you would not mind if she gave you a bit this afternoon?"

"Very well," answered Edward, "that is if it suits Mrs. Quess. Perhaps she may object to carrying out the cart to the castle."

Edward Cossey looked at the lawyer with the contempt that might have been expected; on the contrary, he appeared to be turning the matter over in his mind, for he turned a little time with his knuckles and stared out of the window.

"Five and twenty thousand, and he wants four more, say thirty thousand."

"And were you going to bid thirty thousand pounds to take a bundle of mortgages which will probably never pay a farthing of interest? Why, I have not got three thousand I can come at. Besides," he added, recollecting himself, "why should I interfere in it?"

"I do not think," answered Mr. Quess, ignoring the latter part of the question, "that with your prospects you would find it difficult to get thirty thousand or twice thirty thousand pounds. I am a lawyer who would consider it an honor to lend the money to a Cossey, if only for the sake of the introduction—that is, of course, provided the security was of a legal nature."

"Let me see the title," said Edward.

Mr. Quess handed him the document containing the commands of Cossey & Son, and he read it through twice.

"The old man's madness," he said, and he returned it; "that letter was written by him, and when he has once made up his mind it is useless to try and stir him. Did you say that you were going to see the spirit to-day?"

"No, I did not say so, but as a matter of fact I am. His man, George, a shrewd fellow, by the way, for one of these bumpkins—came with a letter asking me to go up to the castle, so I shall go there to-morrow. It is about this fresh loan of the old gentleman wishes to negotiate. Of course I shall be obliged to tell him that instead of giving a fresh loan we shall have to serve a notice on him."

"Don't do that just yet," said Edward, with decision. "Write to the house and say that their instructions shall be attended to. There is no hurry about the matter, though I don't see how I can help in the matter. Indeed there is no call upon me."

"Very well, Mr. Cossey. And now, by the way, are you going to the castle this afternoon?"

"Yes, I believe so. Why?"

"Well, I want to get there to luncheon, and I am in a fix. Belle will want the trap to go there this afternoon. Can you lend me your dog cart to drive in, and then perhaps you would not mind if she gave you a bit this afternoon?"

"Very well," answered Edward, "that is if it suits Mrs. Quess. Perhaps she may object to carrying out the cart to the castle."

"I have not observed any such reluctance on her part," said the lawyer drolly. "You can easily settle the question. I must go home to get some of the books, though I don't see any reason why I should not attend to the matter. Will you stop across with me and we can have tea?"

"Oh, yes," he answered. "I have nothing particular to do."

And accordingly, as soon as Mr. Quess had made some small arrangements and given particular directions to his clerks as to his whereabouts for the day, they set off to gather for tea in the lawyer's private house.

Edward Cossey looked at the lawyer with the contempt that might have been expected; on the contrary, he appeared to be turning the matter over in his mind, for he turned a little time with his knuckles and stared out of the window.

"Five and twenty thousand, and he wants four more, say thirty thousand."

"And were you going to bid thirty thousand pounds to take a bundle of mortgages which will probably never pay a farthing of interest? Why, I have not got three thousand I can come at. Besides," he added, recollecting himself, "why should I interfere in it?"

"I do not think," answered Mr. Quess, ignoring the latter part of the question, "that with your prospects you would find it difficult to get thirty thousand or twice thirty thousand pounds. I am a lawyer who would consider it an honor to lend the money to a Cossey, if only for the sake of the introduction—that is, of course, provided the security was of a legal nature."

"Let me see the title," said Edward.

Mr. Quess handed him the document containing the commands of Cossey & Son, and he read it through twice.

"The old man's madness," he said, and he returned it; "that letter was written by him, and when he has once made up his mind it is useless to try and stir him. Did you say that you were going to see the spirit to-day?"

"No, I did not say so, but as a matter of fact I am. His man, George, a shrewd fellow, by the way, for one of these bumpkins—came with a letter asking me to go up to the castle, so I shall go there to-morrow. It is about this fresh loan of the old gentleman wishes to negotiate. Of course I shall be obliged to tell him that instead of giving a fresh loan we shall have to serve a notice on him."

"Don't do that just yet," said Edward, with decision. "Write to the house and say that their instructions shall be attended to. There is no hurry about the matter, though I don't see how I can help in the matter. Indeed there is no call upon me."

"Very well, Mr. Cossey. And now, by the way, are you going to the castle this afternoon?"

"Yes, I believe so. Why?"

"Well, I want to get there to luncheon, and I am in a fix. Belle will want the trap to go there this afternoon. Can you lend me your dog cart to drive in, and then perhaps you would not mind if she gave you a bit this afternoon?"

"Very well," answered Edward, "that is if it suits Mrs. Quess. Perhaps she may object to carrying out the cart to the castle."

CHAPTER IX.

THE SHADOW OF BETH.

Mr. Quess departed to his study meeting with a smile upon his thin, gentlemanly face, and a look of satisfaction in his eyes.

"I ought," he said, "to be able to do it. I have done a good deal in the way of debt, but I don't care for the kind of work that I am doing. I am doing it for the sake of the money, and I am doing it for the sake of the money."

Edward Cossey looked at the lawyer with the contempt that might have been expected; on the contrary, he appeared to be turning the matter over in his mind, for he turned a little time with his knuckles and stared out of the window.

THE GENTLER SEX.

THE NUMBER OF WOMEN WHO INHABIT THEIR LIVES IS RAPIDLY INCREASING.

There are over a thousand women and girls in Pittsburg who work in the iron mills.

Mrs. Annie Dierke-Chandler is about to set sail for Europe, where she will stay for two years or so.

Pundita Ramabai carries $20,000 with her to help establish a school for Hindu girls and widows in India.

More than a half of the adult English women are married and unmarried, are working for daily subsistence.

The little princess of the Netherlands is a bright, intelligent, clever maid, with a good deal of character and determination.

At Eschburg, Ore., is a "Ladies' Hammer Brigade," which makes a point of keeping down the tails in the wooden sidewalks.

QU'APPELLE OBSERVATORY.

Readings of the thermometers for the week ending Wednesday, Jan. 16th, 1889:

	6 a.m.	1 p.m.	6 p.m.
Thursday, Jan. 10,	-6	7	7
Friday, Jan. 11,	-2	6	-5
Saturday, Jan. 12,	-12	-4	-9
Sunday, Jan. 13,	-22	9	8
Monday, Jan. 14,	-14	2	-2
Tuesday, Jan. 15,	-9	7	6
Wednesday, Jan. 16,	-4	-4	10

WIND VELOCITY AND DIRECTION.

	6 a.m.	1 p.m.	6 p.m.
Thursday, Jan. 10,	SW 6	SW 4	calm
Friday, Jan. 11,	calm	W 6	W 4
Saturday, Jan. 12,	SW 4	W 6	SW 6
Sunday, Jan. 13,	SW 4	SW 8	SW 6
Monday, Jan. 14,	SW 6	SW 11	SW 12
Tuesday, Jan. 15,	SW 4	calm	SW 4
Wednesday, Jan. 16,	SW 18	SW 20	SW 24

The Qu'Appelle Progress

The Leading Paper in East Assiniboia.

Only $1.00 a Year in Advance.

FRIDAY, JAN. 18, 1889.

Perhaps She Was Prejudiced.

Mr. Van Santvoord, Michalabaster (to Miss Tremontstreet, of Boston)—Miss Tremontstreet, what is your opinion of the abilities of Mr. Mitchell, the English exponent of scientific pugilism?

Miss Tremontstreet (adjusting her eyeglasses)—Well, Mr. Michalabaster, from what I have been able to learn I have arrived at the conclusion that Mr. Mitchell is a deceased cuticle.—New York Sun.

Home & Gossip.

Little Local Links in the Town's Chain of History.

QU'APPELLE.

—Qu'Appelle Masonic Lodge met on Tuesday evening.

—Mr. J. B. Robinson is so far on the mend that his friends are permitted to call and see him.

—If there is to be a cheese factory or creamery established here for next summer it is time that some move was being made in that direction.

—Rev. G. Montreuil has started a Roman Catholic day school. It is at present under his own private direction, but steps are to be taken to organize under the Act.

—Mr. Chas. Macdougall left last night for Okanagan mission. B. C. to purchase two carload of horses. He will ship them as soon as the weather becomes milder toward spring.

—Arrangements are being made for a lecture by Rev. George Daniels, of Regina, on "Slaves" to be in aid of the Methodist Parsonage fund of this town, for the last Tuesday of this month.

—A special meeting of the Qu'Appelle Liberal-Conservative Association will be held on Monday evening next, the 21st inst., in McLean's hall, at 19 o'clock. A full attendance is requested.

—Got left: a new pair of moccasins, a pair of leather gloves, a spectacle case, a jacket of shot, a pair of wool mitts, and a whip have been left at "The Progress" office, no doubt forgotten by the owners, who can recover them by calling at this office.

—At the Leland: J. H. Montee, R. S. Morton, W. S. Burns, Winnipeg; P. W. Mathew, John Gave, A. L. Wilcox, Toronto; L. D. Kowen, D. D. S. Moosomin; L. O. Hillier, Vancouver; C. G. Bothe, St. Louis; Chas. Harrison, Regina; M. Batoche, Montreal; E. Whelan, Egg Lake.

—Next Sunday the Methodist Sunday School will meet in the morning at 11 o'clock, instead of in the afternoon as heretofore. There will be an adult Bible class and an address on the lesson by Rev. A. Andrews. The whole will form a Bible teaching service suitable for all ages.

—Our new story, "Colonel Qu'Appelle," is attracting new names to our subscription list. We still have back numbers to supply any who want to read it from the beginning.

—At the Queen's: R. S.ewart, Winnipeg; R. Wishart and wife, V. H. Dahl, Touchwood; A. Pierce, Lake Erie; Wm. Johnston, Katepew; W. B. Broley, Miss Broley, Wideawake; W. H. Gray, Regina.

—We inadvertently omitted to mention last week the lecture of Rev. Father Drummond on the "Unreasonableness of Unbelief," delivered in the immigrant building on the 7th inst. Mr. G. S. Davidson, M.T.L., was voted to the chair. The lecturer was a gentleman of fine prepossessing appearance, and the expectations of the large audiences were heightened when he stepped on to the platform, and it is speaking mildly when we say they were in no way disappointed. The Rev. gentleman divided unbelievers into two classes; the atheists he described as the bullies of unbelief, and the agnostics as the dopes. By most convincing and conclusive arguments he showed up the unbelievers in God and the Christian religion in a most unenviable light. The lecture throughout was full of illustrations, and altogether made a most interesting and rare intellectual treat. At the conclusion a hearty vote of thanks was tendered the Rev. gentleman.

GOSSIP ABOUT GLOVES.

The favorite is a medium tint verging on yellow.

Heavy stitching on the back of a glove is bad form.

Such atrocities as green gloves with white stitching on the backs can only be tolerated in shop windows.

White gloves are now fashionable with white dresses, but light tan shades are often used even by bridesmaids.

Do not have your gloves too tight; it is neither graceful nor fashionable to see a six and a half hand crowded into a six glove.

Occasionally the general woman fancies an all black toilet, and then the gloves are black kid, undressed or glass, as she prefers.

Evening gloves are as long as ever, and again reach to the lower edge of the short sleeves; they are in monochromatic shape, and must be quite plain on the back, being very simply decorated.

Tan gloves may be worn with all costumes save those of gray or in which gray is most prominent, when gray gloves are substituted. Gray gloves are worn with gray dresses, as are black also.

The "drawn seams," with edges of the kid showing, are on stylish gloves, and are quite new on black gloves, showing white edges of the kid. Ladies' riding gloves are now "cuffed" so that as faced double inside the palms and fingers, just like those worn by men, and they may be short enough to require but one button to fasten them, or long enough to require four buttons.

The undressed kid gloves of light quality, with corded backs, are the fashionable choice for visiting or carriage riders, but heavier kid gloves have white stitching of well color or of black, and are most used for morning wear and for late and with tailor powers of cloth. Some of these are fastened by four large gilt buttons, while others are in the shape of a wrap, with no opening at the wrist.

Tan, gray, black and white gloves are the only colors used in a fashionable woman's outfit, and it is quite possible for her to be well gloved with all her various kinds of gloves in tan shades. The very dark tan color being used for the street in the daytime and very light tan for the evening, and as there are even ten different tints of tan, an individual tone is possible even when "everybody" wears tan.

THEATRE ETIQUETTE.

Never whistle during a death scene on the stage.

Do not play poker with your neighbor during the play.

Never try to be near your friends by sitting on the arm of an orchestra chair.

Be self possessed on all occasions.

If the central chandelier falls upon you try to appear unconcerned.

Take the seats the usher gives you.

Do not keep your eyes on a private box on the strength of a hat check.

Do not whisper to the theatre. A loud and frequent keeps the other auditors from hearing what is said on the stage.

Those who affect the front row in the gallery must not keep pointing electric dry bats or rackets into the orchestra circle.

Do not spoil the plot of the play by telling to the victim not to forget the incriminating papers he drops near the corpse.

Persons who take cold easily and are especially susceptible to draughts should never sit near the corner player in the orchestra.

If you can find a pair of opera glasses without paying a deposit it is only a weak sentiment that requires you to return them.

If you have the end seat do not stretch your legs all the way across the aisle. Leave a little room for the back-of-the-opera boy to pass.

AHEAD OF ALL.

I have used Haysard's Peppermint Balsam in my family for years and have found it almost of any preparation of the kind in curing colds, etc. I can especially recommend it for children. ALEX. MOFFATT, Millbrook, Ont.

WINTER STYLE IN WHISKERS.

You Pay Your Barber and You Take Your Choice—Decide Out of Fashion.

The winter styles of chin clothing are back out. Some have been out about three weeks, and look like a horse brush. The artistic treatment of chin whiskers for the season of 1888-89 shows great variety, depth and thickness, and a wide distribution of warmth and color. For church socials, prayer meetings and Sunday school, the ocean wave cut in figure "A" will be popular. The "Mandarin" figure "B" will be worn at balls and receptions. It will be appropriate for Christmas eve entertainments of a scholar order. In figure "C" is a touché well adapted to distinguished politicians. The Blue Island avenue cut "D" will be worn over bars and at dog fights. "E" is purely decorative and is worn in the police art circles of the same color. The dynamic concealer, as in figure "F," will be worn at the boxes of the grand section.

In the appendix, shown in figure "G," is a fine sample of the recent-sauce Napoleon or "John Dandy" beard. The Washington Avenue fire escapes are out with a new wrinkle, and persons who affect this style will observe in cut "H." The suit shown in figure "I" is imported from St. Petersburg, and warranted to wear in any climate. In "J" are the latest twist chapeaux and will be worn by line reporters to climb telegraph poles. The don't-compare-me-or-my-daughter, exemplified in "K," spread a little more than last year, and may be used to suit the waver or the ballet girl he admires most.

Each American girl affect the "hard-boiled" in figure "L," and have their names to come over and get married with. The Galsworthy, or inverted pompadour style, as in "M," is a staple, and will remain fashionable in front of Frank Laws.

Let's hope until next March. The style at "N" is an artistic development of the Galsworthy, and will be worn at the meetings of the society for the study of the weather of making every man his own meteorologist. The beard shown in "O" is unique out-to-the-country—very rare. "P" is a form of certain wealthy old gentlemen is not worn at all. The "Q" is a twist to each corner and some what thicker, as figure "R" indicates. It will be popular at light opera and the new changes to drinking recreations.—Chicago Herald.

A CURE FOR DEAFNESS.

There have been many remarkable cures of deafness made by the use of Haysard's Yellow Oil, the great benefit being for pain, and swelling and sores. Yellow Oil cures Rheumatism, Sore Throat and Croup, and is used internally and externally for all pains and injuries.

THE CRADLE.

TANNER.—At Mount Pleasant Farm, Qu'Appelle, on the 26th inst., the wife of Mr. Benjamin Tanner, of a son.

MELSON.—At In the Head, on the 10th inst., the wife of Mr. B. Melson, of a son.

Liberal Conservative Association.

A SPECIAL MEETING of the Qu'Appelle Liberal-Conservative Association will be held on Monday, the 21st inst., at 7 o'clock, p.m., in McLean's Hall, Qu'Appelle. All members are particularly requested to attend.

GEORGE B. MURPHY, Sec'y. A. WEISBER, Pres't. Jan. 14, 1889.

ARRIVED!

Direct from Eastern Manufacturers,
One Carload of
Parlor Suites, Bed-room suites,
Longes,
Easy Chairs,
Sideboards,
Tables,
Chairs of all sorts.

These Goods will be sold at the Lowest Cash price and we would request intending purchasers to give us a call. We guarantee Goods and Prices to suit every one.

G. H. V. BULYEA.

Qu'Appelle, Dec. 12, 1888.

NEW GOODS! NEW GOODS!

NOW SELLING
AT VERY LOW FIGURES!

MY STOCK OF

Boots and Shoes,

Clothing, Dry Goods,

HARDWARE,

CROCKERY & GROCERIES

is still very complete. Please give us a call and see for yourself.

J. P. BEAUCHAMP,

QU'APPELLE, N. W. T.

THE LE LAND HOUSE.

Qu'Appelle, Assiniboia.

Love & Raymond,

PROPRIETORS.

Rebuilt, Enlarged, Renovated, Everything New and First-Class Throughout.

SUITS FOR FAMILIES.

TERMS MODERATE.

IMPORTANT OFFER TO OUR READERS

The only high class Illustrated Canadian Weekly, gives its readers the best of literature, accompanied by engraving of the highest order. The Press throughout the Dominion has declared it to be worthy of Canada and deserving universal support; but its best recommendation lies in its steadily INCREASING CIRCULATION.

SUBSCRIPTION $4 A YEAR. 10 CENTS A NUMBER.

SPECIAL ARRANGEMENTS with Messrs. G. E. Desbarats & Son, Publishers, enable us to offer the DOMINION ILLUSTRATED with

The Qu'Appelle Progress,

At the Low Combination Rate of Four Dollars a Year for both. Send your Order Now. Subscription may begin at any time.

Address, THE PROGRESS, Qu'Appelle